Plastic, plastic, plastic! Everywhere we look there is plastic. It was a very useful invention, but recently the problem of its disposal has been brought to the forefront. Now we find that pretty much every institution is seeking to reduce its use of plastic, or, at least take steps to dispose of it in a more responsible way. Even Monty Don on Gardener's World is heard to make unusually frequent references to buying durable plastic garden sundries that can be used more than once, or, for example, re-purposing items such as compost bags into potato grow bags. All the emphasis on 'plastic' set me thinking about how we try to cut down on unnecessary wastage of resources, at Wroughton Country Market.

We wash and reuse old plastic flower pots and seed trays, to grow and sell our plants. Yoghurt pots and milk cartons are cut up to make temporary labels while the plants are growing at home. Many of the eggs are sold in plain egg boxes that have been returned by previous customers, for reuse.

Almost all of our preserves are sold in washed and sterilised recycled jars (with new lids of course!). We are restricted by food regulations regarding the packaging of baked goods, so most of it is well wrapped in cellophane. However, there is usually at least one type of cake that can be bought loose and singly for those who only want one, or prefer not to buy any plastic at all. These cakes are sold in paper bags, but of course you can always bring your own container to take home your purchase.

One of our woodworkers uses old glass bottles to make bird seed feeders. Much of the wood he uses for his bug hotels and bird boxes are offcuts from other projects. One other woodworker uses rescued or recycled wood to make intricate items, some of which are fashioned from several different types of wood. Amongst other things, our newest wood craftsman makes beautiful chopping boards and spoons from offcuts of oak.

Lastly, our ingenious paper and textile craft workers, are always using oddments of wool, fabric, haberdashery, paper and card to produce the exciting range of greeting cards and crafts on sale.

How can you help us? Please bring us your old glass jars, flower pots, carrier bags, egg boxes, oddments of wood, fabric, yarn etc. Do remember to bring your own shopping bag, to reduce the need for our single use carrier bags.

Wroughton Country Market is held each Friday in the Ellendune Community Centre, between 9 and 11 am. We will also have a stall at the Duck Race on Monday 7th May.

A4361 ROAD CLOSURE RE-SCHEDULED FRIDAY 11TH MAY 2018

THE RIDGEWAY LADIES

On Wednesday 4th April Mr. John Jameson-Davis, a graphologist, came to talk to the Ridgeway Ladies on the subject of handwriting and how so much of our personality is reflected in the way we write.

His presentation included examples of handwriting by Teresa May, showing strong will and self-control; Jeremy Corbyn, confident and determined and Donald Trump, excessive need for approval, insecure, poor communicator, sensitive to criticism, fears change and egotistic.

People's signatures were also interesting and if you put a dot after yours, it denotes that you want the last word. (I wonder if Vladimir Putin dots his.)

The importance of handwriting lies in the complexity of the brain activity and how it ties in with motor control, coordination, balance, memory, thoughts and emotions. Early studies have shown that children who routinely use digital devices for most of their school and course work are less self-disciplined in the classroom than children who still use paper and ink. By neglecting the handwritten forms of letters and words by pressing a simple key on a device, we are bypassing important circuitry in the brain; old connections are not being refreshed and new connections not being made. Handwriting is mental aerobics, on a par with crosswords and Sudoku.

If you would like your handwriting analysed please contact John on john@jamesond.com or 01380 828457 – he also has a website.

Our next meeting is Wednesday 2nd May at 7.45 pm when the speaker will be Mr. John Girvan on "The History of the Bra" All ladies welcome.

BURKE AND HARE

at Broad Hinton Village Hall

Thursday, 10 May

[not 13 May as stated in April's Local News]

Doors and bar 7.00 pm. Performance 7.30 pm

Abigail Pickard Price, the Director, writes:

“Burke and Hare were rather a gruesome pair and let us not forget Mrs Hare, who, it would seem, always had “the last blow”. This trio have an incredible tale to tell. The story is innately theatrical and when developing this new script the writer Tom Wentworth and I were continually drawn back to the real characters and events of this remarkable true story.

Using three actors to tell a story that results in the murder of over 16 people is no mean feat but we will let hilarity ensue when the cast, assisted by rather a lot of hats and a few musical instruments, do just that.”

Tickets £12 (£10 concessions) from John Hutchings

Safari Supper

We are delighted that lots of villagers have already signed up for this year's Safari trek around the village! Thankyou also to all those who have kindly offered to host or make a pudding,

Please still get in touch if you would like to join this popular event and share good food, drink and company with your fellow villagers.

Whether you've just moved here or if you've been here for years, the event is a brilliant way to meet new people and simply catch up with people after a winter of hibernation and the spring monsoon season !

It's also fantastic value for money - £20 per head for 3 courses with all profits being donated to local charities including Prospect.

We're sticking the same successful format;

- "Safari" Starter
- "Safari" Main Course
- Pudding / Cheese & Biscuits in the Village Hall

Please also get in touch if you are willing to help support this year's Safari by acting as either a starter or main course host.

Remember that if you host a starter for fellow Safarians, you will be entitled to one free ticket and if you host a main you'll be entitled to two free tickets.

View from the Rectory

Mark Twain once commented that no one likes change - except a baby with a wet nappy! Yet changes occur all the time around us – some so miniscule we barely, if ever, notice them. Other changes creep up on us over time. Our cells die and are renewed, and we only ever see the dust left on the shelf we haven't bothered to clean. Our blood and bones are replenished in truly astonishing ways – but I doubt we ever think a dash to the loo is about change! Trees grow rings, snakes shed skin, birds renew feathers and our skin reacts to sun. We don't really become stressed up about this do we? Until one day perhaps we look in the mirror and under the coloured hair and the face cream is an old lady - HOW did THAT happen ...?

Yet bigger changes, the ones on the world's stage and in our lives we have little control over, make us anxious. I don't even have to name them, do I? For with anxiety comes fear, with fear comes paralysis or fight and flight. In turn this generates overreactions, cliques and sabre rattling, clandestine meetings and damaging actions.

Our world is full of such situations – our communities too, and sadly the church isn't without its peculiarities, partialities, power struggles and angry angst.

Anthony De Mello, in a story about a bewildered abbot, reminds us of the sacred core identity of every living person – a home for the divinity of God who is Love. When the abbot grumbles to the old wise woman who lives on the hill she tells him the secret – that Jesus is one of the brothers and sisters in the monastery – real, alive but one of them. He gathers the brothers and they begin to eye each other up wondering, 'is Brother David Jesus- could it be Sister Rose?', judging 'He couldn't possibly be Jesus - in fact he shouldn't even be in the monastery'; speculating on how to find out and influence him. Then over time the abbot notices a change – the bickering has stopped, the control freaks have become team players, the anxiety about change has become infectious excitement and the monks and sisters are actually going OUT of the monastery and the worship of God lights up the whole town. The wise woman drops in for a visit with a basket of fruit. 'So?', she says – eyebrow raised. The abbot practically levitates with joy telling all he has seen. 'But we still don't know which one is Jesus is ... can you tell me now?' She looks at him and smiles and says 'don't you know?' pointing first at him, then at herself and then at the others ... The penny drops – his eyes widen and all the anxiety and fear have gone. The troubles may come but the old reactions are no more.

We get lost in the events, the reactions, the angst and the anxiety of the world and those around us. We forget that God dwells within us and within others - including those who are not kind. When faced with changes we cannot control it is good to draw breath and try to see the soul and heart of the protagonist - to then treat them as you would wish to be treated. To see, if you like, in them the face of Christ. A huge challenge indeed.
